

Tsebo adds its support to life-saving blood drive

Did you know that a single unit of blood can save three lives or more, which is why Tsebo has added its support to the South African National Blood Service (SANBS), East Coast Radio and NETCARE uMhlanga Hospital's blood drive to collect much-needed blood-stocks as the festive season kicks off.

The 12-hour drive which takes place on Thursday 15 December 2022 from 6am to 6pm at the uMhlanga Hospital aims to collect at least 800 pints of much needed blood. Tsebo will giving a boerewor roll to every person who donates a pint or more, which includes a number of Tsebo's employees who will be there on the day to cook and hand out wors rolls and donate blood.

Tsebo provides cleaning and catering services at uMhlanga Hospital and given its commitment to uplifting the communities in which it works, the Tsebo Solution Group was happy to help out at the drive.

"We are helping out with this life saving initiative because we want to demonstrate goodwill in the communities we serve, and because we want to educate our clients and prospective clients on the many services and solutions that Tsebo provides as a group," says Aveen Thawnarian, Business Development Manager, Thorburn Security Solutions.

"We realised that many of our clients were unaware of the services we provide beyond the scope of what they have contracted us for."

The fact is that the Tsebo Solutions Group offers a range of services from catering, cleaning, security and facilities management through to energy management, engineering and so much more. When combined and tailored to a client's specific needs these can work harmoniously to provide a cost-effective holistic solution that takes care of the many behind-the-scenes aspects of running a business.

Added to this, Tsebo is an ethical organisation, which prides itself on environmentally sustainable processes and on developing and uplifting its people as well as those in the communities it serves.
